We have, through the medium of correspondence and otherwise, furnished the details of the murder by Kirby Smith's army on their departure from Kentucky of sixteen Union home guards and the subsequent hanging, in retaliation, by irresponsible citizens, of rebel soldiers, who, on account of wounds and illness, were left behind by the retreating rebel army. Both acts were equally cowardly and disgraceful. The Union home guards had but one guilty of no conduct warranting such punishment, and it was not the part of an irresponsible mob to retaliate upon the defenseless enemy who by accident fell into their hands. We have heard that, among the Confederate soldiers who were thus mercilessly slain, was a young man named Albert Thirft, whose relatives reside in Ohio. Several weeks prior to the inauguration of the war the said man made his home in Tennessee. He was a youth of fine attainments and of unexceptionable character and of good family. It is said he was forced into the rebel army in opposition to his better judgment. He was wounded in a skirmish near Crab Orchard, Ky., and by the retreating rebel army within the borders of our own State. Falling under the care of a loyal family, he was in a fair way of recovery, and, although we are shocked when we consider the circumstances of his cruel death at the hands of his murderers, it is consoling that, near the close of his life, he expressed the desire to abandon the cause of the rebellion and to return to his home at the North. The wish was expressed in no cowardly spirit, however, for he met his terrible fate with the coolness, with the heroism of one who knew no fear.

Upon an ordinary occasion such weather as was vouchsafed us yesterday and last evening would have kept the pleasure-seeking community in doors, but the town, or the fashionable portion of it, at least, could not suppress the desire to exhibit their admiration for Gottschalk and his charming accompaniment, Miss Patti. Masonic Temple was filled to one's idea of comfort, and the attendance was well worthy the experiment, for every one was gratified, and regretted that the manager's engagements would not admit of a repetition.

A pleasing feature of the entertainment was the introduction of the duetto upon the piano Miss Eugenia de Roode, a former pupil of Mr. Gottschalk, leading and Mr. G. playing the accompaniment, a pleasure thrown in without previous announcement. Mr. Gottschalk is very warm in his praises of Miss Eugenia's instrumentation, and expresses the opinion that no lady of the present age exhibits a degree of skill equal to hers. We are gratified to learn that the Misses de Roode will give a concert in this city, one evening during the present week, and the announcement will of course create a sensation.

The Affair at Hartsville.—The Editor of the Cincinnati Commercial has conversed with a number of members of the Ohio regiments captured and paroled at Hartsville, from whom he learns that the camp of the brigade was surrounded by the rebels during the night, who adroitly captured the pickets without creating alarm. They attacked at daybreak, to the utter surprise of the Federals, many of whom were awakened by a loud roar of musketry. The battalions could not be formed, but all agree that many of the line officers hurriedly gathered their commands together and fought bravely, but without concert and at terrible disadvantage. Some of the squads fought determinedly even after the surrender, but, of course, were soon overpowered. This is the plain statement the Editor obtained from the men themselves. Had the common preception been taken against a sudden irruption of the enemy, these men would have fought well; and, instead of being marched to the rear mortified and dispirited, might have sent back their standards to be inscribed with their virgin victory.

We learn with regret that the Rev. A. C. Osborne has resigned the care of the Jefferson street Baptist Church in this city and accepted a call to the pastorate of the Fourth Baptist Church in St. Louis. Mr. Osborne, during the four years that he has resided in Louisville, has greatly endeared himself to the hearts of his church and congregation, and has won an enviable reputation as a sound and able preacher of the gospel. Outside of his special sphere of pastoral labor, Mr. Osborne has also exerted no inconsiderable influence. Especially in the cause of popular education he has labored zealously and efficiently, and in the Board of Examiners and School Trustees his loss will be deeply felt. Mr. Osborne has it seems already entered upon his new field of labor under encouraging auspices.

We stated yesterday that a duel had been fought at Cincinnati on Friday between a Captain and Lieutenant of the Ninth Ohio Infantry, in which the Lieutenant came out second best, receiving a severe wound in the face. Capt. Stangel, late of this city, was one of the parties.

A correspondent telegraphs from Nashville that parties who came through the rebel lines from Nolinville on the 14th, report an increased rebel force there. The citizens have all left Nolinville, expecting a battle.

The bankers in this city yesterday were buying the notes of the three old banks of Tennessee at 5% discount and the notes of other Southern banks at 25 to 30% discount.

Lieut. Colonel Kell, of the Seventy-fourth Illinois Infantry, was captured near Nashville one day last week by a rebel private. Kell had acted very indiscreetly, it is said.

The New Albany Ledger says the big guns have been placed aboard the Tuscarumba. She is to have a stern battery of two guns in addition to her present armament.

A correspondent writing from Nashville says it is quite certain that the Military Commission now in session at Nashville will sustain Gen. Buell.

Two companies of loyal Tennesseans, belonging to the Second Cavalry, arrived in the city last evening by railroad from Lexington.

Joseph A. Hamilton, Esq., was qualified before Judge Monroe, of the County Court, yesterday, as a Notary Public for Jefferson county.

Governor Robinson and Adjutant General Fennell, of Kentucky, passed through Cincinnati on Sunday enroute for Washington.

One hundred army wagons were received in this city during the past week from Cincinnati.

A LETTER FROM GENERAL DUMONT.
To the Editors of the Louisville Journal—
GALVANIS, December 12, 1862.

General Dumont's daily issue of the paper you speak of is too slow, giving the recent surrenders of troops at Hartsville, and make it the occasion of an assault upon me. Unconscious of ever having injured you or myself, such treatment, I cannot in justice forgive. Your paper is a scoundrel. You have announced; but in repelling them will endeavor to be as brief as the nature of what you have said and the facts will allow. After nothing more.

We are not sure that anything better was to be expected from the regiments that brought shame upon themselves at Hartsville and to some extent upon the Federals. There were raw regiments, and those that had not been trained at all. I am informed that they are the same regiments that Gen. Dumont had at Frankfort and elsewhere in this state. Their conduct was perfectly what would be expected; but they made no movement, did not quieten citizens and stole and robed continually. They stole slaves upon all occasions. No doubt there were good men among them, but they were not numerous. The word of man or God. At the capital of our State they outraged not only all honesty but all decency. They would go habitually into the gentler's room to look for the most prominent in nature, right or wrong, the eyes of the whole families, and, when persons made complaint of such doings to Gen. Dumont, he would say, "The men are good, but the officers are bad." Such was the portion that made whatever resistance was to be made at Hartsville. As for the rest, let the nightcats be drawn over their heads.

"We have not learned whether General Dumont was in actual command at Hartsville or not. He is most likely to have been. He is one of our government's tools, and was wounded. We have the hand of a very bad general. Shepherdville three months ago was attacked by 300 guerrillas, armed with flying artillery and small arms, and the head of the column, a mile off, where he had been taken to the hospital, was cut off by either party. The doctor was dead and cold. Indeed, I am told that a short while after the engagement, the prisoners captured and paroled, who left Lebanon Junction, and communicated the fact to me, never saw an officer or man of the command. They had not come from them. We had heard no firing, not a single shot—and had not the slightest intimation that an enemy was at hand, until the arrival of the doctor, and still the doctor had done nothing. The doctor was not notified until the patient was dead and cold. ABSTRACT OF THE REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

PERFECTION OF THE BLOCKADE.

Since the commencement of our national difficulties, four naval squadrons have been effectually organized, and stand ready for duty on our maritime frontier with a rapidity and suddenness which find no approach to a parallel in previous naval history; and which it would be difficult to name other than could have deserved such distinction. These squadrons have been incessantly maintaining a strict blockade of such gigantic proportions that eminent soldiers in the highest ranks of regular and volunteer service have communed publicly to denounce it as a material impossibility; and yet after its most imposing naval undertaking had been for a period of eight months in operation, and after its results had been effectively extended along the entire sweep of our Atlantic and Gulf coasts, from the outlet of the Chesapeake to the mouth of the Rio Grande, the same commanding authorities, without the inter hand of all the vessels which had evaded or escaped the vigilance of our blockading forces, could not refuse in their own statement to admit the perfect character of the blockade, as well as the efficiency of the blockade, was conspicuous and wholly conclusive, and that in a previous war had the ports of an enemy's country been so completely closed by a naval force, for even such a short time as two months.

The amount expended for the current fiscal year, ending June 30, 1862, was $84,155,511.77.
